MALOU LAUREYS

DURING THE NETWORK MEETING we will work in depth on transforming a defense mechanism on a neurological level, using the the Transformational Keys® (TK) facilitation model.

The Transformational Keys facilitation model is based on the Evolutionary Neuro-Biological Adaption (ENBA) Theory, a unifying theory on human functioning and change that I am developing for my thesis. The basic premise of this theory is that most unwanted behavioral, emotional, cognitive patterns (and physical symptoms) are learned neuro-bio-logical adaptations to past experiences and that they can be changed using the neural change mechanism of memory reconsolidation.

The Transformational Keys facilitation model offers 4 keys to activate this neural change mechanism in order to address a defense mechanism: Connect (with yourself and others from higher consciousness), Explore (all the aspects of your unwanted pattern), Rewire (your conditioned mind, healing your wounds), and Create (the life you are meant to live, honouring your “thriving” goals).
